Acoustic Properties Tom McEnaney 2017-06-15 Acoustic Properties: Radio, Narrative, and the New Neighborhood of the Americas discovers the prehistory of wireless culture. It examines both the coevolution of radio and the novel in Argentina, Cuba, and the United States from the early 1930s to the late 1960s, and the various populist political climates in which the emerging medium of radio was chosen means to produce the voice of the people. Based on original archival research in Buenos Aires, Havana, Paris, and the United States, the book develops a literary media theory that understands sound as a transmedial phenomenon and radio as a transnational medium. Analyzing the construction of new social and political relations in the wake of the United States' 1930s Good Neighbor Policy, Acoustic Properties challenges standard narratives of hemispheric influence through new readings of Richard Wright's cinema in Argentina, Severo Sarduy's radio plays in France, and novels by John Dos Passos, Manuel Puig, Raymond Chandler, and Carson McCullers. Alongside these writers, the book also explores Che Guevara and Fidel Castro's Radio Rebelde, FDR's fireside chats, Caignet's invention of the radionovela in Cuba, Evita Perón's populist melodramas in Argentina, Orson Welles's experimental Night of the Living Radio, Cuban and U.S. "radio wars," and the 1960s African American activist Robert F. Williams's proto-black power Radio Free Cuba. From the doldrums of the Great Depression to the tumult of the Cuban Revolution, Acoustic Properties illuminates how novelists of the radio age converted writing into a practice of listening, transforming realism as they struggled to channel and shape popular culture. Media & Culture Richard Campbell 2002 Rev. ed. of: Media and culture. 2nd ed. c2000. Transcendental Magic Eliphas Levi 1968-01-15 This is Eliphas Levi's (1810-1875) best-known book. This work arguably made Levi the most influential writer on magic since the Renaissance. Originally issued in French, the English translator is A.E. Waite and it is that anyone else could have better captured the essence of Levi's work. The book is divided in two parts; the first is theoretical and the second is practical. This is a fascinating and often debated work involving a discussion that covers almost the entire realm of Ritual and Magic. Riders of the Purple Sage

The Sounds of Early Cinema Richard Abel 2001-10-03 The Sounds of Early Cinema is devoted exclusively to a little-known, yet absolutely crucial phenomenon: the ubiquitous presence of sound in early cinema. "Silent cinema" may rarely have been silent, but the sounds of sound(s) and sound/image relations characterizing the first 20 years of moving picture exhibition can still astonish us. Whether instrumental, vocal, or mechanical, sound ranged from the improvised to the pre-arranged (as in scripts, scores, and cue sheets). The practice of mixing sounds with images differed widely, depending on the venue (the nickelodeon in Chicago versus the summer theatre in rural Iowa, the music hall in London or Paris versus the newest palace cinema in New York City) as well as on the historic moment. A single venue might change radically, and many times, from 1906 to 1910). Contributors include Richard Abel, Rick Altman, Edith Arnoldy, Mats Björkin, Stephen Bottomore, Marta Braun, Jean Châteauevert, Ian Christie, Richard Crangle, Helen Day-Mayer, David Fullerton, Jane Gaines, André Gaudreault, Tom Gunning, François Jost, Charlie Keil, Jeff Klenotic, Germain Lacasse, Neil Lerner, Patrick Loughney, David Mayer, Domini-que Nasta, Bernard Perron, Jacques Polet, Lauren Rabinovitz, Isabelle Raynauld, Herbert Reynolds, Gregory A. Waller, and Rashit M. Yangirov.

Portrait of a Young Painter Mary Kay Vaughan 2015-02-16 In Portrait of a Young Painter, the distinguished historian Mary Kay Vaughan adopts a biographical approach to understanding the culture surrounding the Mexico City youth rebellion of the 1960s. Her study of the life of painter Pepe Zúñiga counters a literature that portrays post-1940 Mexican history as a series of uprisings against repression, injustice, and social neglect that culminated in the student protests of 1968. Rendering Zúñiga's coming of age out of formal politics, Vaughan depicts midcentury Mexico City as a culture of growing prosperity, state largesse, and a vibrant, internationally-informed public life that produced a multifaceted youth movement brimming with creativity and criticism of authority. In an analysis encompassing the mass media, schools, politics, family, sexuality, neighborhoods, and friendships, she subtly invokes the tools of discourse, phenomenology, and affect to examine the formation of Zúñiga's persona in the decades leading up to 1968. By tracing the influences that shaped his worldview, she historicizes the process of subject formation and shows how doing so offers new insights into the events of 1968.

What Technology Wants Kevin Kelly 2010-10-14 From the author of the New York Times bestseller The Inevitable— a sweeping view of technology as a living force that can expand our individual potential This provocative book introduces a brand-new view of technology. It suggests that technology as a whole is not a jumble of wires and metal but a living, evolving organism that has its own unique and tendencies. Kevin Kelly looks out through the eyes of this global technological system to discover "what it wants." He uses examples from the past to trace technology's long course and then follows a dozen trajectories of technology into the near future where technology is headed. This new theory of technology offers three practical lessons: By listening to what technology wants, we can better prepare ourselves and our children for the inevitable technologies to come. By adopting the principles of pro-action and engagement, we can steer technologies into their best roles. And by aligning ourselves with the long-term imperatives of this system, we can capture its full gifts. Written in intelligent and accessible language, this is a fascinating, innovative, and optimistic look at how humanity and technology join to produce increasing opportunities in the world and how technology can give our lives greater meaning.

Thomas Greenfield 2005-08-08 This collection is a representative set of ten of the key papers which Thomas Greenfield, arguably the doyen of contemporary theories of educational administration, has published over the past 20 years. His writings as they appear are eagerly sought after and studied by scholars, students and practitioners in Britain and the English-speaking world, but are not always readily available individually. The collection charts the development of Greenfield's theory of social reality as human invention, and explores strands of argument on the nature of knowledge, on administrative theory and practice, on values, on the limits of science and the importance of human subjectivity, truth and reality. The volume is concluded by a foreword between Greenfield and Peter Ribbins, which reflects on Greenfield's career and elaborates on the range of his complex and often controversial ideas.

Robert A. Emmons 2004-02-26 Gratitude, like other positive emotions, has inspired many theological and philosophical writings, but it has inspired very little vigorous, empirical research. In an effort to remedy this oversight, this volume brings together prominent scientists from various disciplines to examine what has become known as the most-neglected emotion. The book begins with the historical, philosophical, and theoretical foundations of gratitude, then presents the current research perspectives from social, personality, and developmental psychology, as well as from primatology, anthropology, and biology. The volume also includes a comprehensive, annotated bibliography of research on gratitude. This work contributes a great deal to the growing positive psychology initiative and to the scientific investigation of positive human emotions. It will be an invaluable resource for researchers and students in social, personality, and developmental, clinical, and health psychology, as well as to sociologists and cultural anthropologists.
